"May de good Lot' bloss you, ma'am, of you can gives me again de light ob-day."

"Now," I said, as I raised my hand and held it one foot from her eyes, "how many fingers can you see?" "Three," she replied, which was comest.

I told her to not her eyes by pulming many times a day, and to come and see me three times a week. I also gave her some advice about her dier, and told her

Next clinic day the naw the seventy line of letters at one foot, and they did not fade away so did the E the first time the saw it. I taid her to palm some moon, and in a few minutes the counted my fingers controlly every time I asked her to, with only one exception
